

I'm not robot  reCAPTCHA

Continue

Guy looking at other girl meme template

The distracted girlfriend, also known as Man Looking at Other Woman, is an object that marks the stock photo series in which a man looks at the back of a woman walking past while another woman, presumably his romantic partner, looks on disapprovingly. Origin November 2, 2015, the source photo, taken by photographer Antonio Guillem, was posted to the stock photo database iStock under the description Disloyal man with his girlfriend looking at another girl (shown below, left). According to a post published on the Meme Documentation Tumblr blog, the earliest known subtitled version of the image was sent to a Turkish Facebook group at an unknown time. On January 30th, 2017, Prog Düşmanlarına Verilen Müthiş Cevaplar Facebook page posted the image with captions identifying the man as Phil Collins peering pop music while prog music watching (shown below, right). The creator of the Phil Collins meme has since stated that they were inspired by the political meme site Siyasetin, which is the earliest available version was posted on January 30th, 2017, too. On February 23rd, 2017, Instagram user @_dekhbai_ posted the photo with the caption Tag That Friend/Who Falls in Love Every Month (shown below, left). Within seven months, the record received over 28,500 likes. On August 19th, Twitter user @n1m161 posted the stock showing the man staring longingly at socialism while capitalism looks on (shown below, right). On August 21st, Redditor danikger sent a captioned version of the image in which the man looks back at the 2017 solar eclipse while being stared at by scientific evidence supporting the dangers of staring at the sun (shown below). Within 24 hours, the post received over 31,200 points (93% upbeat) and 130 comments on/r/me_irl. In the coming days, more posts about the meme format were sent to /r/MemeEconomy. In March 2018, Slate cited it as one of memes most influential to the spread of the Object Labeling trend of the late 2010s. Photo Series Compilations When the popularity of the stock image began to spread, people discovered similar stock images in the series with the same actors in different scenarios. On August 22nd, Tumblr user clubhead posted a collection of similar photos from the series, with the man looking at the same woman on various occasions with at the end showing his romantic partner in distress and questioning why she didn't dump him. Klubbhead added a response to his post the next day, showing a picture of the man annoyed at his partner's shopping habits; along with 2 series of stock photos from the set of the first showing the first man and woman as a happy couple once (shown below, left) and the latter showing them all 3 to be together with the implication that they all had intercourse together in the end (shown below, right). As of August 25, the post collected over 47,500 notes. On August 24, The Twitter @akfamilyhomeak posted a tweet with a similar scenario, but instead shows women from the series get closer together with the man is unclear in the background. Later that day, Twitter user @oranforest added a photo in the same series as @akfamilyhomeak, with the two women joining the implication of them coming together (shown below). Interviews in late August, photographer Antonio Guillem gave several interviews about the image to various news sites, including Wired and The Guardian, in which he revealed that he did not know what a meme was until recently. On August 29, NY Mag published an interview conducted by Guillem with the models from the photo. Distracted girlfriend In late October 2017, another photograph of Antonion Guillem was discovered on Shutterstock in which the roles were reversed, depicting a man's girlfriend looking fancy a man walking by (shown below). On October 29th, 2017, Redditor toastr sent a photo with the new stock image placed under the original Distracted Girlfriend photo, along with the caption Tables have turned. Within 24 hours, the post received over 25,600 points (92% upbeat) and 240 comments. That day, Redditor JOacc777 reloaded the image macro to /r/dankmemes, where it received up to 8,400 points (91% upbeat) and 110 comments over the next day. Meanwhile, a photoshopped variation of the image was submitted by Redditor SteW-to/r/me_irl, with the original distracted girlfriend as jealous girlfriend (shown below). On October 30, The Daily Dot published an article about the new stock image titled Distracted girlfriend brings equality to the world of meme. Henry Cavill Photoshops January 26, 2018 tweeted Twitter user @synstere a still of the upcoming film in the Mission Impossible series starring Henry Cavill (shown below). Shortly after the tweet, they created a distracted girlfriend parody of the photo, and received over 1,500 retweets (shown below, left). The next day, Tom Cruise tweeted the photo. In response to the tweet, film critic Ali Plumb asked for someone to make a distracted girlfriend parody of the image. In the answers, many Twitter users created their own parodies. The most popular was created by the Twitter @Malforian, and received over 1,700 retweets (shown below, right). The Boy Bible covered distracted girlfriend /Henry Cavill parodies on The 28th. Shorty Awards 15. Meme beat galaxy brain, right in front of my salad. Roll Safe, The floor is... and Tiny Trump. 18th-century ekvi @ELXGANZA valent 16. They captioned the tweet: 'I've found the 18th century equivalent to the distracted girlfriend meme. The post (shown below) received more than 34,000 retweets and 110,000 likes in 24 hours. @ELXGANZA followed the tweet by writing: 'Fun the painting is by Joshua Reynolds and it shows the actor David Garrick stuck between the allure of Comedy and prestige tragedy, so here is a depiction of how the meme would have worked in its original context. They posted the painting with each of the characters in the painting labeled comedy, troubled actor and tragedy. The post (shown below left) received more than 700 retweets and 2,900 likes in 24 hours. People responded to the photo by posting memes with the a pain. That day, the Twitter @TheHipsterRebbe tweeted a version of the image in which the characters are labeled social contract theory, enlightenment dude and divine right to knights. The post (shown below, center) received more than 300 retweets and 1,700 likes in 24 hours. The Twitter @KitsuneAlicia photoshopped the image so that both the distracted boyfriend and Reynolds' painting noticed the characters. The post (shown below, right) received more than 260 retweets and 1,200 likes in 24 hours. Several media outlets covered the reaction to the painting, including Mashable, The Daily Dot, and more. Cape Town Recreation July 7th, 2018, Twitter user @pjmboothang tweeted a photo she had taken of her friend who inadvertently bore a strong resemblance to the distracted girlfriend photo (shown below). The tweet received over 200,000 retweets and 566,000 likes. After the photo went viral, the girl was identified as Trishna Pema from Cape Town, South Africa. The spread of her image was covered by Buzzfeed and the Daily Dot. The Twitter @j47di tweeted a photoshop of the image that used the original template as jealous girlfriend in the new photo, and received over 70 retweets and 400 likes (shown below). Star Wars Recreation at 2018 San Diego Comic-Con on July 23rd, 2018, Instagram user @jjujukkity2323 posted a recreation of distracted girlfriend photography including Princess Leia and Han Solo cosplayers at 2018 San Diego Comic-Con (shown below). That day, the post received more than 1,500 likes. That same day, the Twitter @Kesseltoyrun re-posted the photo, which received up to 33,600 likes and 10,600 retweets within 24 hours. On July 15, a Moments page titled Star Wars fans put their own spin on the distracted girlfriend meme at Comic-Con was also posted on Twitter, gathering various reactions to the photo (shown below). On July 24th, a The Daily Dot published an article about the image titled 'Star Wars' cosplayers reenact distracted boyfriend meme at San Diego Comic-Con. On 15 August 2018, Sweden's advertising ombudsman, an advertising watchdog, judged that the use of distracted girlfriend in advertising was sexist after it was used by recruitment company Bahnhof in a recruitment ad showing Bahnhof marked as the attractive woman and your current job marked as her boyfriend (shown below). The Civil Ombudsman unanimously ruled that the ad was 'gender discriminatory' and suggests that women interchangeable in the same way as a change of workplace. The Civil Ombudsman cannot impose sanctions, just adopt judgment. The verdict was covered by CNET. Wedding photo 2 bi_irl 9. The post received over 300 points. October 1st, Twitch and Twitter user @skykrksays posted the photo on Twitter linking it to the distracted girlfriend meme, getting over 27,000 retweets and 94,000 likes (shown below). In the responses, Twitter users commented with Object Labeling memes similar to the distracted girlfriend meme. For example, user @amokistan posted a version poking fun at how the wedding photo was distracted girlfriend but gay, and got over 1,100 retweets and 4,300 likes (shown below, left). User @mikevil posted about how his life had been taken over by Critty memes, getting 28 retweets and 239 likes (shown below, right). These jokes were covered by The Daily Dot. JablinskiGames 22, 2019 / 10:00 PM (2019) The video received over three million vies within a week. On February 25th, viewers took notice of a moment in the video that resembled the distracted girlfriend meme (shown below). Distracted Boyfriend meme IRL ft Jack black @ pic.twitter.com/12Q5AD4f1 — IDir H A (@StoicDir) February 25, 2019 February 26, 2019 26 February 2019 Redditors began posting Jablinski Distracted Girlfriend Format to /r/dankmemes (shown below). Shocked Girlfriend June 25th, 2018, Twitter user Ernie Smith posted a thread collecting various stock photos of her boyfriend from the original photo appearing easily shocked when looking at screens (shown below). That same day, the Twitter @Lifetheuniverce photoshopped several of the images on the original distracted girlfriend photo (shown below). Within 24 hours, the tweet received over 2,100 likes and 300 retweets. On June 26, Twitter posted an Moments page for the photos titled Distracted girlfriend's partner is stunned by phone and computer screens. Meanwhile, The Daily Dot published an article about the stock photos titled The Distracted Girlfriend's Girlfriend is likely to look at this meme in shock. Hungarian Pro-Family Billboards February 10 announced Viktor Orbán, Hungary's prime minister, that he would promise major tax breaks for Hungarian women who have more than four children. Hungary wants to increase its population and Orbán sees the incentive to be preferable to letting migrants into the country. On March 13th, Facebook user Gábor Ligeti posted a picture of a billboard in Budapest, recognizing the models from the distracted girlfriend meme (shown below). The poster promotes Orbán's family protection action plan. Many Twitter users found the poster ironic. The day @ToddAtticus tweeted a distracted girlfriend editing the billboard situation received 470 retweets and 1720 likes in one day (shown below, left). The Twitter @OshaDavidson also took advantage of the format of the situation (shown below, right). New York Times Frontpage May 29th, 2019, a variation of the distracted girlfriend meme was published on the front page of the New York Times business section where automaker Renault ignores Nissan to admire Fiat Chrysler. That day, the Twitter @cbquist tweeted: Dear NYT - a half-page Distracted Boyfriend Meme was really the most important thing for a section front? Within 24 hours, the tweet received more than 735 retweets and 4,200 likes (shown below, left). After the publication of the cover, people mocked the newspaper's use of the meme. The Twitter @thesheetztweet used the format to criticize the use of a meme instead of photojournalism. The tweet received more than 775 retweets and 6,000 likes in 24 hours (shown below, in the middle). But a day before, on May 28, a similar version of the meme was tweeted by Twitter user @Malavtweets, a day ahead of the New York Times cover (shown below, right). The user did not accuse the newspaper of plagiarism. They wrote: Such things are inevitable. One can only hope that this is a coincidence. For their defense, they use only black font color. That day, Twitter posted an Event page about the cover. In addition, the New York magazine covered the meme writing: Anyone can give a warm round of applause to the New York Times, which arrived this week this week in a big way. The paper published its own version of the Distracted Girlfriend meme on Wednesday, using the signs to represent Fiat Chrysler, Renault and Nissan. Vintage Photo Version On February 26, 2020, Redditor Euxiom posted to/r/OldSchoolCool a photo they traced to in the early 1950s of a woman looking at a passing soldier, writing, Early in the 50s, a distracted girlfriend way before the distracted boyfriend meme (shown below). The photo led to a revival of distracted girlfriend posts on Reddit using the photo. User PapaDragonPH posted a self-referential version of the image to/r/memeconomy, getting over 10,000 points (shown below, left). Redditor Marius0306 posted a similar edit in /r/teenagers, and received over 12,000 points (shown below, right). Various examples Search interest interest